The Great Lakes NeuroTechnologies Conference was held on May 3, 2013 in Independence and was attended by about 40 people. We had 4 stroke survivors and my wife Mary attended as well. We each spoke about our strokes and talked about how new technology helped us. I said the best technology which doesn't exist yet today would cure me from my mind as well as my right arm and my right leg. The stroke survivors then became panelists where the Great Lakes NeuroTechnologies personnel were divided up into 4-5 groups for a 5 minute presentations on how they could help stroke survivors live better lives. It was really a great time.

The conference lasted about 3 hours and was well worth the time. I have to give Chris Pulliam who is a PhD Senior Biomedical Engineering Researcher for Great Lakes NeuroTechnologies credit. He met the stroke survivors and just made us feel at home. He did a great job.

Thank you,

John
